The reception given Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. C. B. Hewitt and Mrs. Henry L. McCune at the home of the former, on Troost avenue, was given an added zest by the knowledge that it was, in all probability, the last of such functions for this season. Moreover, three interesting brides were the guests of honor, and every circumstance conspired to make the event unusually delightful. Flowers decked the rooms in profusion and the veranda was in requisition as an open air parlor, prettily furnished for the purpose. Marguerites were the floral decorations, except in the diningroom where Meteor roses with crimson ribbons and assaparagus fern were effectively employed.

One of the pretty home weddings the past week was that of Miss Jennie May Moore and Mr. Charles Carroll Jack, which took place at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. George William Moore, on Troost avenue Wednesday evening, June 14. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Stone, of the Unitarian church, in the presence of the two immediate families and a few friends. The house was decorated with palms and American Beauty and Meteor roses. The bride wore a dress of white Paris muslin trimmed with Valenciennes lace and carried roses, and was ciennes lace and carried roses, and was attended by little Hazel Murphy in a pret-ty, childish frock of white and pink rib-on Thursday evening at the Second Presbyterian church, Mr. Orville H. Bilger and Miss Cordia Taylor were married, Rev. Mr. James R. Smith, of Chicago, and Rev. Dr. H. D. Jenkins uniting in performing the ceremony. The ushers were Masters Wille Stelp, George Yahnke, Lawrence Baer and Harold Clark, boys about 14 years of age, and who composed a part of Mr. Bilger's Sunday school class. This feature was an innovation of the usual custom, at least in Kansas City, and Dr. Jenkins, in his remarks before the marriage ceremony, commented favorably upon it, and spoke of it as being the first time he had witnessed such an occurrence during his long service in the ministry. Promptly at 8 o'clock the first notes of the wedding march from "Lohengrin" pealed forth from the organ, and immediately the bride and groom, preceded by the young ushers, came from the chapel into the auditorium of the church, and with measured tread proceeded to the chancel, the young gentlemen conducting themselves with the composure of veterans in that line of duty. The bride was becomingly attired in a brown cloth traveling gown.

Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Bilger left for an Eastern wedding journey, which will include St. Louis, New York and Pennsylvania.

CRUELTY TO FLOWERS.

It Is Shown by Wearing or Carrying Them in the City Streets. The woman who loves her garden says the woman who loves her garden says she cannot understand how people can bring flowers to town these days, especially when they carry them in the hand or wear them for bouquets. "They take them out of the shady, cool gardens, fresh, dewey and flagrant, and hold the deldewey and flagrant, and hold the delicate stems in hot hands or pin them in coats or gowns to fade and dle," she said plaintively. "Wild roses, which city people dote on, wilt before the railway station is reached, and pansies are dying of thirst iong before the train arrives in town. Pansies are hardy and will perk up and take a fresh hold on life if placed in water before they are quite dead, but most country bred flowers are most fragile, and I always feel sad when I see them going off to the grime and dirt and hot breath of the city, to be forgotton in a man's buttonhole or dropped and trampled on in the car. Maybe I am supersensitive on the subject, but I try to do my duty and send the blossoms I love best to the children's missions in the slums every week. But I send them packed in cotton and paper and plentifully sprinkled before they are placed in the box. I never do up a box of blossoms without hording, alimost unconsclously, that they will have a comfortable journey. It's just the same yearning sollcitude book lovers have when they are handling books or when they see a beloved book ill-treated. And I think anxiety and tenderness over flowers is a more natural emotion." And then she placed a great branch of cream white blossoms in a shining blue bowl and the room was redolent as of the perfumes of Araby. icate stems in hot hands or pin them in Typographical Errors.

The intelligent compositor is something of a humorist, and not always an unconscious humorist either. Some of his greatest feats have occurred in Philadelphia, where the great editors write a very execrascious humorist either. Some of his greatest feats have occurred in Philadelphia, where the great editors write a very execrably bad manuscript. In one case a correspondent, who was describing a tarring and feathering scene, at which he was present only in a professional capacity, was made to say "getting the feathers ready for us," instead of "ready for use." The same newspaper office had a printer who turned the expression "from alpha to omega" into "from apples to oranges, and conveyed the impression that some-body had set the Delaware river on fire, by calling ferry boats "fiery hosts."

A cooking school called the "New, Century" was cruelly made to appear as the "New Cemetery," and doubtless the same pessimistic typo changed the "Masque of Pandora" into the "Morgue of Pandora." A diver who had found two old bells in the Delaware went before the public as a "driver" who had found "two old bills." The Scripture aliusion to the leaven that "leaveneth the whole lump" was perverted into the startling agricultural announcement that the leaven had leavened "the whole turnip."

A foreign editor who wrote that the British lion was "shaking his mane," was edified the next morning with the announcement on his authority that the national animal in question was "skating in Maine." A more natural error was that which called "a member of the legislature," a "member of the liquor store."

One of the Philadelphia morning papers, which formerly gave close attention to marine news, informed its readers on one occasion that the bark Betsy Jane had arrived in Honolulu "with an oil well on board." Investigation proved that there was nothing in the report except "all well on board." An old-time inn named the "Star and Garter hotel" was once rechristened by a printer as "the Shoe and Galter hotel." A foreign dispatch about the war between Russia and Turkey contained an allusion to transports convoyed by gunboats, which was turned into the novel announcement that the transports were "convoyed by gunboats."

Health and climate have much to do with that, and the advice of friends and physicians often materially shortens it or makes the somber robes much less the reminder of our loss than strict observance of custom would have it.

The heaviest mourning worn is the widow's. It remains practically unaltered for a year and a day, and then she can give up crepe, but as a rule women wear it six months longer.

Deep crepe three months, slightly less six months, black for three months; but it is Judge Freer, of Fort Smith, discoursed as "I am opposed to wife-beating. I have no respect for any man who will beat a woman. I am not like the St. Louis judge who saw extenuating circumstances in a wife-beating case. A man has no right to whip his wife. That is not what he married her for. Doesn't she see that buttons are put on his clothes? Of course she does. Doesn't she see that his collar button doesn't roll under the dresser, and if it does, doesn't she get down on her knees and fish it out for him? Of course she does. Doesn't she cook his meals for him, and have them ready for him when he comes home, and doesn't she sit up sewing for his children or stay all night watching them when they are sick? Of course she does. And what has she done to be beaten by him? Nothing at all. Very often she makes the living and he gets mad because she doesn't make enough to enable him to wear silk ties and patent leather pumps and fill himself to the brim every night and roll home and tumble into bed and snore off his drunk like a hog.

"I tell you what it is, I can extend no mercy to the man who gets drunk and makes a beast of himself. I can have some sympathy for the man who steals, because he is often compelled to do it. Say, do you know that I never had a man before me charged with wife-beating that that man did not have an ugly mug on him? Well, that's a fact. It takes some considerable nerve to sandbag a man or to hold a man up, but what nerve does it take to beat a poor, weak woman? Bah! I get hot all over when I have one of those cases before me. I feel just like taking the man by the nape of the neck and kicking him clean out of town. I run up against a good many hard propositions while sitting on the bench, but the hardest is the wifebeater. I am not going to have any mercy on that class of people. I am going to drive the sword of justice into them deep and break it off. I am going to lambast them with all my might and main. I am going to salt all the freshness out of them, and if they do not get what they deserve it will be the fault of the law and not of me.

"I will fine that fellow $100. I am glad of it. I would have been just twice as glad if I had been able to fine him twice as much. The man who beats his wife wants to get out of the jurisdiction of the Fort Smith police court, at least while I am on the bench, if he doesn't want to get into the consomme away over his head. I stand squarely on that platform, gentlemen, and there is no backwater which will run me off."

Professor—"This eccentricity you speak of in your daughter, isn't it, after all, a matter of heredity?"

The mother (severely)—"No, sir. I'd have you to know, sir, that there never was any heredity in our family."
